

Saltwater flavor : two short stories / by

Dan Raymond

Description

In Saltwater Flavor, Dan Raymond shows how valuable the agreements and arguments of life are to each of us. The first short story, "Saltwater Flavor," for which the book is named, two children--a five year old boy and a six year old girl--disagree on where sand crabs come from. This brilliant story that shows how quickly a disagreement polarizes friends is a lesson for everyone. The second short story, "This Place I Go," follows a man and a conflict he has with an elderly woman regarding a place near the ocean they both consider their spot. This book is a must read for anyone that loves the ocean.
