

Surfland / photographs by Joni

Sternbach ; introduction by Phillip Prodger

Description

On the waves, surfers are muscle, sinew, and impulse. But at the shore, gravity weighs down their limbs. They become ordinary people again, their hair slicked with salt spray, their bodies squeezed into neoprene wetsuits. And it is here, on the beaches of Montauk, New York, Carpinteria and Santa Cruz, California, that Joni Sternback finds and photographs them.