He was a key artist in three prominent California cultural movements of the mid-20th century; the Surf Culture, the Hippie Culture and the Jesus People Movement. The worldwide recognition he attained from his involvement in the first two movements gave him a platform for the powerful Christina testimony he gave after receiving Jesus Christ as Savior in the early 1970s. Proclaiming the Deity of Jesus was central in his spoken testimony and illustrating the Gospel of John gave him a chance to use his God-given artistic talents to further glorify Jesus.
